One of the most important uses to which paper has been put in recent years has been as a substitute for wood for decorative and art purposes. The latest employment of this paper lumber is in the construction of a botel at Hamburg, Germany. This novel greatdence, which has just been finished, has been built entirely of paper boards, which, owing to their impregnation of certain chemical solutions during manufacture, possein an advantage over wood in being fire-proof. In addition to this point the paper boards are thoroughly water-proof, and are consequently unaffected by the moisture of the atmosphere and by heat.

THE distinction is now said to belong to Bombay of possessing the greatest piece of solid, masonry construction, that the world has seen in modern times. It appears that for years past the water supply of Bombay depended upon works known to be defective, involving the possibility of a water famine in that great Eastern scaport, and in view of this a consultation of eminent engineers was held, under the direction of the Government, with the result that a large dam was determined on, to inclose the watershed of the valley which drains into the ses south of Bombay. This gigantic structure, designed and accomplished by the superior engineering skill of T: O. Glover is two miles long, 118 feet in height and 103 feet wide at the base. with a roadway on the top twenty-four leat wide, the stonework slone costing $2,000,000. The lake of water which this dam imprisons is some eight square miles in area and sixty miles of pipe perform the Twilte thousand Hindus were specially traffied by Engineer Glover for employment on this dam.

> THE Nagasaki Express, of 19th inst. says :-The British s.s. Lennox arrived here at 6,30 a.m. on Sunday last, from Shanghai, flying the yellow flag, and anchored off the quarantine station. Upon the sanitary officials boarding her it was reported that her commander, Captain Swinnerton, had died of cholers at 10.30 the previous night, and that five officers and the saloon steward were then suffering from symptoms of the same disease. The sick people were at once landed and placed in the quarantine hospital, and as soon as the necessary arrangements could be made the body of Captain Swinnerton was interred in the cemetery at Urakami, where the funeral service will be held as soon as the ship is released from quarantine. The ship was also disinfected with all despatch, and no further cases broke out. The fact that all those who were attacked, with one exception, were members of the officers' mess, and that excep tion was the messroom steward, points to the conculsion that the sickness was caused by some tainted food, partaken of shortly after leaving Shanghai. It is also reported that Captain. Swinnerton suffered from similar symptoms previous to leaving Shanghai, from which he recovered before the attack of sickness which resulted in his untimely death, at an early age. We are glad to be able to state that the whole of the aix patients are rapidly recovering.

When that supremely self-conscious and lissatisfied personage, Childe Harold, related the story of his pilgrimage in several cantes for the benefit of his despised fellowcreatures, he was wont to vary the monotony of his descriptive writing by the insertion of moral reflections upon the general baseness and futility of humanity in contrast with the beauty of Nature. Hi sowers of description, however were so great, and the pictures that he sometimes drew so exquisitely beautiful, that his readers were well content to skip the intrusive morality, and forget it in their rapt contemplation of what really constitut done of the finest poems in the English language. Unfortunately, it is not so wit a more modern pilarim, Lord Randolph Churchill, whose literary rowers are not upon the same level, and whose readers.

More especially was this noticeable in the last letter tha the wanderer addressed from South Africa to the Daily Graphic, in which he gave lengthy description of the great diamond. mines that he had visited. The diamonds did not sparkle in Lord Randolph's hands the mines become as dull and uninteresting as coal-pits, as unreal as a commercial prospectus; and it was with a greediness of joy that his readers once more recognised the original Lord Randolph in the delightful moral that ended so many dreary co. lumns, in the cold conclusion, as he calls it, to which the sighs of piles upon piles of diamonds arranged for export had brought him. How would such a sight as that have > democracy; but it would appear that upon an aristocrat, even when that aristocrat is nosserged of democratic tendencies, they exert a quickening influence. Surely some of his Lordship's brilliance upon this occasion must have been borrowed from the stones upon which he moralised. It was a happy accident that caused him to meet with one of his l'addington constituents upon a cow-catcher in South Africa-a sign of the far-reaching influence that is attached to his personality even in the ittermost parts of the world—but do not let him accept it as an omen that summons. him back to political life in England. Let him rather think that this discovery of his in the diamond-fields, a discovery more precious than any of the precious stones by which he was surrounded, is likely to be but one of many, but the threshold to a glorious career of scientific inquiry. As a statesman, we have done very well without him, and shall probably continue to do very well, -absence has not made our hearts any fonder of him in that capacity. As a man of the world, he does not seem to have succeeded in endearing himself to his fellow-travellers -- popularity is but a fickle chase, and unworthy of his seeking. As a writer of letters, he leaves much to be desired, and we cannot heartily congratulate the Daily Graphic upon its last special correspondent. But as a man of science and a philosopher, he seems to us to be beyond all praise. Above all others is the life of contemplation held in honour : let him lead it. Nothing is required for it but seclusion and silence; and his fellow-countrymen, who have so readily forgiven him his silence, will gladly give him also all the
